FUNDING THE BANS

A Look at the Major Corporations Financing the Lawmakers Behind State Abortion Bans

AUGUST 2019

Executive Summary

In 2019, nine states passed severely restrictive anti-abortion laws, including Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana and Missouri.

In the wake of this wave of oppressive legislation, corporate leaders are using their platforms to fight back. In Georgia, top industry leaders said they are considering moving their operations elsewhere if the state begins to enforce its ban, and in early June, a coalition of nearly 200 businesses nationwide announced their opposition to the laws, deeming them “bad for business.”

But when it comes to gender equality and health care access, many leading corporations are talking the talk, but not walking the walk.

Fifteen big-name companies — AT&T, Boeing, Coca-Cola, Comcast, Delta Air Lines, General Motors, Google, Johnson & Johnson, Lyft, Mastercard, Microsoft, PepsiCo, Pfizer, Uber and Walmart — boast their commitment to gender equality. But each of these companies contributed significant sums of money to support lawmakers (or the committees backing them) who sponsored oppressive anti-abortion legislation.

The following report demonstrates the monetary contributions of 66 corporations, including these fifteen companies, to lawmakers who are hostile to reproductive health care access. The contributions went to lawmakers directly in AL, GA, LA and MO and through the Republican State Leadership Committee (RSLC), which works to elect Republican state legislators, in the past two years.

Some top findings in the report, which tracks contributions made since 2017, include:

- AT&T: While AT&T leadership claims to be proud of the company’s recognized diversity inclusion efforts, its various PACs contributed nearly $108,000 to support politicians and committees who pushed for these state abortion bans.
- Boeing: Boeing touts its fiscal contributions to “community initiatives” that help inspire young women, yet the company contributed at least $107,500 to politicians instrumental in passing state-level abortion bans.
- Coca-Cola: Coca-Cola promised to “promote inclusion, celebrate diversity and champion equality.” But the corporation contributed tens of thousands of dollars to support politicians and committees furthering anti-abortion legislation across the U.S.
- Delta Airlines: Delta says that claims that “promoting diversity and intersectional empowerment of women is key to Delta’s success” — yet Delta has contributed at least $44,000 to politicians and committees who passed and supported restrictive state-level abortion bans.
- Google: Despite Google’s stated commitment towards “advocating for gender equity,” the company contributed at least $51,000 to support officials and committees who supported and pushed restrictive state-level abortion bans.

The total contributions of these 66 companies to support politicians that supported abortion bans is nearly $3 million.

At a time when people have lost faith in government institutions, they are expecting more and more out of the companies they support with their hard-earned dollars. Studies show that consumers — and employees — expect corporate CEOs to “take the lead on change.” Americans choose to support companies that take a stand on the issues that matter to them.

The American people are not aligned with the corporations on this issue. Polling shows that Americans overwhelmingly oppose these recent abortion restrictions, as they demonstrate extreme government overreach and take away women’s rights.

It’s time for these leading companies to put their money where their mouth is and defund the bans.

AT&T

AT&T Touts Its Commitment To Workplace Equality, Diversity And Inclusion...

AT&T's Chairman And CEO Emphasized That He Is Proud Of AT&T For Its Recognized Diversity And Inclusion Efforts. "For a company to be its best, it needs strong, engaged talent at every level. And that requires a workforce, leadership team and board of directors as diverse and inclusive as the customers and communities it serves. We take this very seriously at AT&T. We know that a diversity of perspectives, experiences and backgrounds is an incredibly powerful way to unlock new ideas and better understand the needs of others. That's why we work so hard to recruit, develop and listen to diverse talent. Today, our workforce is nearly 44 percent people of color and 33 percent women. And our employee resource groups and employee networks are among the most engaged and effective anywhere. We're proud that our diversity and inclusion efforts have been recognized. DiversityInc ranked us third on its Top 50 Companies for Diversity list in 2017 and 2018. Last year, Fortune and the Great Place to Work® organization together named us one of the Best Workplaces for Diversity. And we also were named to Bloomberg's Gender-Equality Index. While there is always more we can do, we are committed more than ever to being one of the leaders in diversity and inclusion." [AT&T 2018 Diversity & Inclusion Report, accessed 6/5/19]

Boeing Claims To Be Committed To Supporting “All Woman With The Will To Achieve Their Dreams” ...

Boeing Touts Its Commitment To Supporting Women And Its Fiscal Contributions To “Community Initiatives” That Help Inspire Young Women. “At Boeing, we are dedicated to addressing the need for more women to pursue careers in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM). Women have played an important role in the history of Boeing. At the company’s inception in 1916, founder William Boeing hired seamstress Rosie Farrar to stitch together linen wings for the early B & W seaplanes. Just two years later, Helen Holcombe joined Boeing as the first woman in the engineering department. In 2018, Boeing and The Boeing Charitable Trust partnered with more than 140 STEM organizations and contributed over $19 million toward community initiatives that helped inspire an estimated 630,000 young women in STEM. As a result of U.S. tax reform, Boeing contributed an additional $16 million toward community initiatives that helped inspire young women in STEM — a total of more than $36 million in 2018. Over the past seven years, Boeing has contributed nearly $140 million toward community initiatives that have had a positive impact on nearly 5 million young women and girls around the world.” [Boeing, Women Make Us Better, accessed 6/10/19]

WarnerMedia Suggested That It May No Longer Film In Georgia Due To The State's Extreme Anti-Abortion Legislation...

WarnerMedia Released An Official Statement Claiming It Will “Reconsider” Doing Business In Georgia Once Its Abortion Ban Goes Into Effect... “WarnerMedia — the parent company of movie giant Warner Bros. and cable networks HBO, TNT and TBS, among other entertainment properties — on Thursday joined Netflix and Disney in saying that it will ‘reconsider’ doing business in Georgia if the abortion law takes effect. ‘We will watch the situation closely and if the new law holds we will reconsider Georgia as the home to any new productions. As is always the case, we will work closely with our production partners and talent to determine how and where to shoot any given project,’ the company said in a statement, which also noted that ‘we do respect due process.’” [HuffPost 5/30/19]

Disney Says It May No Longer Film In Georgia Over The State’s Abortion Ban, Despite Contributing To Supporters Of The Ban

Disney’s CEO Suggested That It May No Longer Film In Georgia Because Of Its Extreme Anti-Abortion Law...

Disney’s CEO Suggested That The Company Would Not Film In Georgia If The State’s New Abortion Law Takes Effect... “Walt Disney Co Chief Executive Bob Iger told Reuters on Wednesday it would be ‘very difficult’ for the media company to keep filming in Georgia if a new abortion law takes effect because many people will not want to work in the U.S. state. ... Disney has filmed blockbuster movies in Georgia such as “Black Panther” and “Avengers: Endgame,” and it would be a blow to the state’s efforts to create production jobs if the entertainment giant stopped filming there. ... Asked if Disney would keep filming in Georgia, Iger said it would be ‘very difficult to do so’ if the abortion law is implemented. ‘I rather doubt we will,’ Iger said in an interview ahead of the dedication for a new ‘Star Wars’ section at Disneyland. ‘I think many people who work for us will not want to work there, and we will have to heed their wishes in that regard. Right now we are watching it very carefully.’” [Reuters, 5/29/19]

NBCUniversal Suggested It May No Longer Work In States Enacting Abortion Bans, Despite Its Parent Company, Comcast, Contributing To Groups And Politicians Who Support Or Defend These Bans

NBCUniversal Suggested That It May No Longer Film In States That Passed Extreme Anti-Abortion Legislation...

NBCUniversal Stated That They May Pull Productions From Georgia And Other States If Restrictive New Abortion Laws Take Effect. “NBCUniversal, CBS/Showtime and AMC Networks joined other entertainment companies on Thursday in saying they may pull productions from Georgia and other states if restrictive new abortion laws take effect. ‘If any of these laws are upheld, it would strongly impact our decision-making on where we produce our content in the future,’ NBCU said in a statement. CBS and Showtime said states that ban abortion after six or eight weeks ‘may not be viable locations for our future production.’ Netflix, Disney and WarnerMedia had issued similar statements earlier. Georgia is a hub for television and film and could lose billions in an industry-wide boycott. But the companies are waiting for the outcome of legal challenges to the new laws before taking any action.” [The Daily Beast, 5/30/19]
