Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week walking program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The walking program was designed to be low-intensity and supervised. The program was evaluated using a variety of physical and psychological measures. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The women in the walking program showed significant improvements in physical fitness, including increased aerobic capacity, muscle strength, and flexibility. They also showed significant improvements in psychological health, including reduced stress, anxiety, and depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
