

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies has led to a system wherein all the goods of governments have to offer internationally trade possibilities for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade system has been fully implemented, free trade, with significant changes arising from trade, has become an international theme. Indeed, the World Trade Organization (WTO) Agreement is a key tool, and several trade agreements within the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) have been signed.

However, barriers to international trade exist, and the economic adjustment process has been made that cannot be fully explained by perfect competition. In Figure 10, a free trade system represents the domestic market economy, assuming the international demand curve is downward sloping. The domestic supply curve is upward sloping. Domestic suppliers are willing and able to produce at other prices, prices of those resources. International trade is represented by Figure 10. The equilibrium price resulting from international trade, P_1 , would be produced only by domestic firms.

Figure 10
International Trade

It shows that international trade has Total Supply harmonization, the production of domestic goods and services is harmonized, and the world price P_2 and quantity Q_2 . They are able to produce more of the domestic good at lower prices. Also at P_2 , domestic firms are producing Q_2 and foreign producers are producing $Q_3 - Q_2$. Thus, domestic firms are producing less goods because imports would provide a competitive edge to the domestic firms.
