importance as law enforcement agencies all over the world are struggling to cope   Global Security Watch—Korea William E. Berry,2008-03-30 Since the end of World War II primarily through the actions of external powers the Korean peninsula has been divided with North and South Korea engaged in a competition for the heart and soul of the Korean nation and international legitimacy President Bill Clinton called the peninsula one of the scariest places on earth and some experts have referred to it as one of the last vestiges of the Cold War Now well into the first decade of the 21st century and many years after the end of the Cold War President Clinton s observation remains accurate In fact the argument can be made that the Korean peninsula is even more dangerous than it was in 1993 How did this happen when throughout most of its more than 2 000 year history Korea was one of the most homogeneous countries among the world s nation states with its people sharing a common language and ethnicity Berry compares the ways in which the two Koreas developed their respective political and economic systems over the past 50 years as well as the competition between them He examines the North Korean nuclear weapons program analyzes the challenge to peace and stability it represents and concludes with predictions of possible outcomes in this volatile area   Undermining Global Security Amnesty International,2004 Contains disturbing examples of exports from existing or new EU Member States of military security and police MSP equipment technology and expertise used for grave human rights violations or breaches of international humanitarian law Reveals the arms production and exporting activities of the ten new countries joining the EU on 1st May 2004 Explores how the enlarged EU will have over 400 companies in 23 countries producing small arms and light weapons Demonstrates how this dramatic enlargement of the EU presents both potential opportunities and dangers for European arms control Analyses the current polices and practices of 15 EU Member States and the 10 new Member States with regard to their control of the transfer of military security and police MSP technology weaponry personnel and training It demonstrates why Amnesty is convinced that more effective EU mechanisms to control MSP exports are urgently required to help protect human rights and ensure respect for international humanitarian law   Cyberspace in Peace and War Martin Libicki,2016-10-15 This book is written to be a comprehensive guide to cybersecurity and cyberwar policy and strategy developed for a one or two semester class for students of public policy including political science law business etc Although written from a U S perspective most of its contents are globally relevant It is written essentially in four sections The first chapters 1 5 describes how compromises of computers and networks permit unauthorized parties to extract information from such systems cyber espionage and or to force these systems to misbehave in ways that disrupt their operations or corrupt their workings The section examines notable hacks of systems fundamental challenges to cybersecurity e g the lack of forced entry the measure countermeasure relationship including the role of malware and various broad approaches to cybersecurity The second chapters 6 9 describes what government policies can and as importantly cannot be expected to do to improve a nation s cybersecurity thereby leaving leave countries less susceptible to cyberattack by others Among its focus areas are approaches to countering nation scale attacks the cost to victims of broad scale cyberespionage and how to balance intelligence and cybersecurity needs The third chapters 10 15 looks at cyberwar in the context of military operations Describing cyberspace as the 5th domain of warfare feeds the notion that lessons learned from other domains e g land sea apply to cyberspace In reality cyberwar a campaign of disrupting corrupting computers networks is quite different it rarely breaks things can only be useful against a sophisticated adversary competes against cyber espionage and has many first strike characteristics The fourth chapters 16 35 examines strategic cyberwar within the context of state on state relations It examines what strategic cyberwar and threats thereof can do against whom and how countries can respond It then considers the possibility and limitations of a deterrence strategy to modulate such threats covering credibility attribution thresholds and punishment as well as whether denial can deter It continues by examining sub rosa attacks where neither the effects nor the attacker are obvious to the public the role of proxy cyberwar the scope for brandishing cyberattack capabilities including in a nuclear context the role of narrative and signals in a conflict in cyberspace questions of strategic stability and norms for conduct in cyberspace particularly in the context of Sino U S relations and the role played by international law The last chapter considers the future of cyberwar Kumaran V.
