HARDWOOD & BAMBOO JANKA RATINGS

*Common Red Oak with an average Janka rating of 1290 is the industry benchmark for comparing the relative hardness of different wood species.

The Janka rating scale is the most frequently used test to assess the hardness of wood. A higher number on the Janka scale indicates a harder wood. Ratings for various woods may vary based upon the wood's source and a number of related environmental factors. In an effort to provide our customers with the most accurate information, the ratings above are the averages from our various suppliers. Therefore, please note our figures may differ from Janka ratings provided by other flooring companies.
