RE: NEW POLL – Voters in Oregon’s 2nd Congressional District say their member of Congress has not done enough on Trump’s family separation issue; want oversight & accountability

The Trump Administration’s “zero tolerance” policy that separated children from their parents is concerning constituents who plan to vote in the Midterms in Oregon’s 2nd Congressional District.

While OR-02 leans towards Republicans on party self-identification and is currently represented by Republican Congressman Greg Walden, voters in the district made it clear that their member of Congress has not done enough to address family separations and want to see increased Congressional oversight and action to hold those responsible for the crisis accountable. Voters overwhelmingly say that the Trump Administration has a responsibility to return the children to their parents and want their member to increase transparency, accountability and oversight of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) – an Office within the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) which is charged with overseeing the separated children. As the poll went into the field, hundreds of children separated from their families remained in ORR custody.

Voters in the 2nd District are paying close attention to the Trump Administration’s “zero tolerance policy” and say they would be more favorable to their member of Congress if they were to take action to hold those responsible accountable.

Key findings from Global Strategy Group’s recent poll are as follows:

KEY SURVEY FINDINGS:

- Constituents of Congressman Walden say their member of Congress has not done enough and view the “zero tolerance” as “inhumane”: Half of voters (49%) say their member of Congress has not done enough. Nearly the same number of voters (48%) agree more that the policy of separating children from their parents is “inhumane and we should hold those responsible for it accountable” compared to just 36% who say the policy is “necessary and will stop people from illegally crossing our borders.”
- The majority of voters want Congress to take action on this issue: Two-thirds of voters (68%) across the district say they want Congress to act by increasing the accountability and transparency of the agencies and officials overseeing the separated children. This is a bipartisan view with strong support from Democrats (82%), Independents (62%), and Republicans (62%). In addition to increased transparency and accountability, nearly half of Walden’s constituents (46%) support legislation to immediately reunite the children with their families.
- Voters had little confidence that the Trump Administration would reunite these children by the court’s July 26 deadline: While the vast majority of voters (71%) say that the Trump Administration has a responsibility to reunite these children with their parents, more than half of voters in each district (56%) said they had “very little” confidence that the Trump Administration would meet the deadline to reunite these families.

- Voters are more favorable to a member of Congress who takes action on this issue: Eight in ten voters (80%) said they would have a more favorable view of him if he supported legislation to increase transparency on this issue, while two-thirds (66%) said they would be more favorable towards him if he supported an investigation into the conditions and facilities where children are being held. Most voters (71%) also said they would be more favorable of him if he called for the Director of the Office of Refugee Resettlement to testify before Congress about the reunification efforts and treatment of the children in its care. And a majority of voters (52%) would have a more favorable view of him if he supported legislation to stop the Trump Administration from separating children from their parents altogether.
- Voters are paying close attention to the child separation issue: Nine in ten (92%) likely voters in the district have seen, read, or heard either “a lot” or “some” about the Trump Administration’s “zero tolerance policy”, including 77% who say they have heard “a lot” about this issue. Voters across all parties are paying close attention to the issue, with nine in ten Democrats (93%), independents (89%), and Republicans (94%) saying they have seen or heard “a lot or “Some” about this issue.
